WALE PRINCE BOYCOTTED BY INDIAN CITY

750,000 in Metropolis of Hindudustan Slight Their British Ruler

London, Dec. 12.—The visit of the Prince of Wales to Allahabad, India, has been completely boycotted, according to a dispatch from the Central News from that city.

The Prince arrived there at 10 a. m., yesterday, but the thousands of decorated streets were deserted except for a few thousand people, mostly Europeans and Eurasians. It is said that the boycott was organized by the Hindu opponents of British rule.

The arrival throughout India in recent days has evoked a total of 400, according to official returns. The greatest number of persons were taken in custody in Calcutta, where what is termed the "Hindu" movement is becoming more evident in the volunteer movement.

Previously to his visit to Allahabad, the Prince's tour had taken him chiefly among the Mohammedans of Western India. At Allahabad, however, he was met by the direct influence of Mahatma Gandhi, leader of the Hindu opponents of British rule. The name, translated, means "the City of God," and is one of the sacred cities of the Hindus, who make up more than three-quarters of the population of more than 200,000.
The city also is the chief trade center in Central India and the junction of several railroads. It is of great political importance.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Formal Presentation for Miss Josephine Cushman

By BETTY ALDEN

A MUCH-DEBATED member of the debutante circle is Miss Josephine Cushman, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cushman of Lime Street.

Although this popular debut has been the guest of honor at several affairs since the opening of the season, it was Monday night that her formal presentation took place in the form of a dance at the Country Club. It was a gala event for the girls and their beaux, no less than 600 invitations having been issued for the affair.

The ball was given by Mrs. John Harwood, a cousin of Mrs. Cushman's. Both the Harwoods and Cushmans are of the Summer color. Mr. Harwood, the Harwood's Winter home being on Dudley Street in Brookline. Preceding the dance, Mrs. Harwood, who was formerly a friend of Chicago, entertained at dinner her guests including the leaders for the dance and a corresponding number of girls.

Of the group of young men who showed the guests about were the following: Philip Kunkhardt, head usher, assisted by Rhodes Lockwood, Oliver Leland, Dudley Nash, Harold Cady, John Wilbur, William Garrison, Ed. Philip Ward, Francis Sumner Andrew, Gordon Norton, Francis Hill, John Norton and Frederick Thibault.

As I have said, this was not Josephine's first appearance on the social stage. The latter part of last winter her cousin, Miss Theodora Willard, gave a tea dance for her at her Commonwealth Avenue residence. Just a few weeks ago Miss Cushman assisted at the tea which Mrs. and Mrs. J. Warren Briggs gave for their daughter, Miss Edith Sturges. The Sturges, who have a home in Boston, are for the Winter at Mrs. Volcott Howe Johnson's home at No. 7 Commonwealth Avenue, where the presentation of their young daughter took place. Another daughter, Miss Susan Sturges, was presented last year.

I understand the Miss Cushman is planning to join a lively group of Boston's younger set going to Toronto and back for the Winter sports during the Christmas holidays.
Shortly after her return from the State resort—where, by the way, she is finding wide favor among members of the smart set.

Miss Cushman will depart for New York, where she is to take part in a number of Gotham's big activities.
Approes of the rummage sale today and tomorrow at Horticultural Hall, in aid of the Baby Hygiene Association, here's a funny story about the trouble which a group of women in charge of the sale underwent just a few days ago.

The trouble all began when the thought came to the women that they would help their cause along by making an exhibit of some of the association's well known. When it was learned that among these well known were eight pairs of lucky bouncing twins, enthusiasm waxed high, and a chorus of delighted "Ohs" and "Ahs" arose. They said, "everybody loves twins." They photographed them in a row and laid down "A Yard of Twists." The latter, alas, was more easily said than done. Although a photographer and an assistant, a photographer was disappointed to "shoot" the bouncing babes, with a camera not a gun, the yard of twists was never secured. Which proves that twins are as troublesome as lovable.
Fate seemed determined that the

MISS JOSEPHINE CUSHMAN twins remain unphotographed; one pair of troubles had a cold and couldn't be taken out. The better half of another pair was not on look, because an aunt had made off with the other half for the day; automobile tires blew out; chauffeurs' noses were inflamed; and the twins and short of it was that wedded fate was triumphant, and the twins unphotographed.

But the fact that the beloved twins couldn't be photographed didn't deter the group of society women in charge of the sale from chaining all sorts of interesting articles to sell today and tomorrow at Horticultural Hall.

The Baby Hygiene Association maintains twenty-one stations in different parts of the city. At these stations there are frequent conferences between mothers, the doctors and nurses connected with the association, and from these stations the modest staff make household visits to adjoining communities when the little babies are too ill to be taken to the station.
Ever since the war, quite naturally, there have been many charity organizations working for babies of foreign lands, and everyone who contributes to these organizations is to be admired, but don't forget the babies of BOSTON—they need help, too.

Mrs. Carl Keller has charge of the sale, with the following corps of society women helping her: Madame Howard Conroy, Richard Harris, Reginald Hall, Morton P. Prime, Richard P. Strong, Hon.
Dr. Arthur T. Chandler, Arthur T.
Arthur T. Hood, William Toggles and the Misses Margaret Thorne and Mary Ames.

MISS CHESTER GUILD and her daughter, Miss Margaret Guild, Boston have arrived from their country in Paris, planning to spend the Winter at the Carlton and at Cannes, the latter one of the most popular Winter resorts of Southern France. Mrs. Guild and her daughter left Boston about a month ago.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cummings Barr, formerly of Boston, and frequent visitors in the Hub, gave a musicale on Sunday afternoon in their New York home. Among their guests were Mrs. Conde Nast, Mrs. Charles de Rham, Jr., Mrs. Robert C. Black and Misses J. Victor Ostrander, Jr., Philip Rhineland and Tilton Hutchinson. Mr. and Mrs. Barr were of the New York club and came on to Boston for the Yuletide game. Mr. Barr is a grand old one of the better sort of the Hub, belonging to the class of '20.

Those who wish to purchase the present of dolls and other toys, should not forget to take a trip to Mrs. Walter C. Bayliss' home at 20 sterilization laws were held unconstitutional today in an opinion of Percy H. Kelly and C. G. Hingham, Judges of the Third Judicial District. The Act of 1917 was held unconstitutional because it designates inmates of State

The Surprising Adventure of the Pearl Necklace

And What Happened

(From "Skin Deep" by Frank R. Adams in January COSMOPOLITAN.)

MRS. NORMA GRANT-GRAHAME surveyed her fifty-year-old reflection with deep distaste. Mrs. Grant-Grahame's soul was a wisp of smoke, a fairy thing that floated over the housestays, but her body was a tool that could just barely be crowded into a stout size corset of the prevailing mode. "Clarice," she decided, "take off that pearl necklace. It only makes my neck look older."

The maid unfastened the clasp and held the trickle of glowing beads by one end.

Her mistress continued: "What wouldn't I have given to have had those things when I was young, but what good are they to me now? My jewels, my lingerie, my furs, my stockings, my hats are the trappings of romance, and the body I put them on is built for sitting in a comfortable chair and knitting."

"I'm sure madam is unnecessarily harsh with herself."

Mrs. Grant-Grahame grinned at her maid. "That's all right, Clarice, or whatever your Irish, or real, name is. You know it makes you mad, just the same as it does me, to see us diamond-dusted dowagers puffing around from beauty parlors to hair-dressers, to Turkish baths, while youngsters like yourself grub away your beauty in work that spoils your hands and your complexions. Why, you'd look a thousand times better in my things than I do—you've got an ankle that would justify the price I pay for my silk stockings and your neck and shoulders could stand close scrutiny if some one's eyes should be attracted to them by gleaming jewelry."

She paused in her monologue. "Put on the necklace," she commanded. "You know you're dying to see how it will look."

The effect was eminently satisfactory, especially so to Clarice, whose color heightened with pleasure at the sight of her own interesting reflection in the mirror.

"I'm the only human woman in the world who would ever think of doing what I am about to do," decided Mrs. Grant-Grahame. "I'm going to play that I'm one of those meddlesome fairies who go around rewarding poor but virtuous young ladies in the story books. By the way, Clarice, are you poor but virtuous?"

"Moderately so," the girl responded, after a moment's reflection.

"Keep the necklace on for the moment, but take off everything else."

The fairy godmother viewed the effect of this command critically. "You carry yourself well, child, and I never dreamed that those flat front and back lines could be achieved without a corset. I've never seen anyone like you before in just this stage of frank adornment. I guess that people of your build don't patronize the Turkish baths. Put on those chiffon stockings I bought last week in a moment of extravagant idealism. I've never worn them, so they'll fit close enough."

Little by little the two conspirators built up on a foundation which nature had lavishly endowed with slim, suggested curves, blue eyes, nearly-black hair and an interesting mouth, an edifice which, when completed, Mrs. Grant-Grahame declared to be a "veritable man trap." The gown had presented the only difficulty, but Clarice had one of her own made over from her mistress's last year's black velvet.

The mistress surveyed her maid with amusement and satisfaction.

"Do you mind going to the opera with my party this evening?" Mrs. Grant-Grahame asked deferentially when they were both ready for the street.

The girl laughed. "Suppose we meet some of madam's friends?" Clarice questioned doubtfully—

"I'm the only human woman in the world who would ever think of doing what I am about to do," decided Mrs. Grant-Grahame. "By the way, Clarice, are you poor but virtuous?"

JUST PALS! "Martha," lioness, and "Alice," mastiff, lived together happily in same cage at Selig Zoo, Los Angeles, for three years. A well meaning society demanded they be separated. They were, and both animals started to pine away, so they were put in same cage again.

A SWEET WOMAN! Mrs. Loretta Scholtz, with candy, enables her employers, a Cincinnati firm, to charge $5 a pound for her confections. Don't miss candy to conform with your boudoir curtains. (Int.)

IN FIGHTING WOOD! Countess Nelly Ze Eulenberg, former of an American girl of Columbus, O., has arrived here to fight for her estate, seized during war. Lived in Germany most of her life. (K.)

AIN'T WE GOT FUN! These youngsters would never make a good ad for a flannel underwear firm. The weather is their last worry, for in Summer or Winter this is all they wear. These little "bump" patients at a Forrysburg, N. Y., Hospital, get as much enjoyment out of life as their "healthier" brothers and sisters. The first day it snowed they were as pleased as any wool-clothed New England youngster. Here they are out for a slide. "Bully bumper" is everything. (Int.)

THE NEW "NATIONAL BIRD" Hazel Schamp, left, and her sister Thelma, of Woodland, Cal., say the world no longer holds the losers—for them at least—because they've just made $400 by growing turkeys. They bought 400 pullets two months ago, cared for them "as if they were babies," and now they've sold the lot and are going into the business on a big scale. (U. & U.)

HUG ME TIGHT! If she can make her hands meet around the cross—seen unto hubby—because she'll rule him then. At least that's the legend of St. Kevin Cross, Wicklow, Ireland. This husband is trying to make his wife's hands meet. Anna's some men queer, girls? (Int.)

Cut up 1/2 pound butter, 1/2 pound lard, 1/2 pound onion, 1/2 pound meat and vegetables (carrots, turnips, potatoes, onions and a little herb), then a crust of salt, flour and baking powder, then the potpie is ready to eat. It is a little rich, sweet with to this it. WHAT HANDS DISCLOSE THINGS BEYOND FORTUNE-TELLING
By Dr. Wm. A. McKeever

How about working in a box factory, a freight house, a lumber yard, a building mill or an excavation? Could your right hand show any intelligence here?

Laboring Man
The typical laboring man harbors a secret contempt for the so-called fellow who never has to sweat for a dollar. The only way to close this breach of ill-feeling between the two classes is to train the sort boy while young to become skilled in at least one kind of manual labor.

Soft and Plump
An examination of his hand showed retardation. This member was soft, plump and beautiful. That is, he manifested a reasonable sympathy for the well-being of others, so far as he understood them.

Now, what about your hand and your mind?
I want to know if you are a "New House" man, who has worked his way up from their own rags, or if you are a "New House" man, who has worked his way up from their own rags, or if you are a "New House" man, who has worked his way up from their own rags.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

A charming young college student once amused me by her rapidity in committing to memory a long list of names. I asked her to repeat the list as part of her studies. I held the book while she recited it without a mistake. Several days later I was writing an article and she called to tell me that she had written the poem which she had given me the day before. I asked her to recite the poem. She did so for me. I asked her to repeat the list of names. She did so for me. I asked her to repeat the list of names. She did so for me.

Haven't you encountered during the last year a great many persons who complained of the progress they have been able to make? Many workers will tell you that they have not made as much progress as they would like. They will say that they have not been able to get on as well as they would like. They will say that they have not been able to get on as well as they would like.

It is no doubt credible to Americans and Americans that we are always intent upon breaking records. We are always intent upon breaking records. We are always intent upon breaking records. We are always intent upon breaking records.

Yet it may be consoling to those who find themselves lagging behind the progress has been slow to reflect that the greatest and most dependable successes achieved in life by individuals and enterprises are those which have been achieved in the slowest and most unobtrusive manner.
